

Need shown for clarification of club purpose

One of the most important organizations in any school is the club. Whether a student is interested in ecology, business, helping people, being affiliated with professional organizations, promoting knowledge, or just having fun, there is either a club for that purpose, or a club can be formed if enough student interest is generated. At the present time there is a need for new members in most of the clubs. To find out if a club satisfies your needs, just show up for a meeting. There are no obligations involved.

A list of clubs and their purposes are as follows:

Booster Club

To promote spirit for our sports' organizations within LBCC and the community.

Chi Sigma Chi

To participate in community and college service projects, usually with children, in an attempt for better understanding for both the children and the college participants.

Ecology-Outdoor

To acquaint, by various means, the general public with man's relationship to his environment. To advise in general against engaging in pollution our environment, and to familiarize the community with measures that can be taken by individuals to decrease the extent of unnecessary harm done to the environment.

1500 Club

Relaxation of the mind and the enjoyment of games (chess, hearts, pinochle, etc.)

Future Dental Assistants

To be affiliated with professional clubs, such as American Dental Assistants' Association; and to hold meetings in classroom.

The Forum

A loose-knit, low pressure organization whose members want to participate in an examination of current ideas, situations, and ideals.

Independent Literary Union

To advance and perpetuate participation in and appreciation of the Literary Arts.

International Club

To promote fellowship between foreign students and the general student body of LBCC.

Jesus Lunch Bunch

To exalt Jesus Christ and to have fellowship with other Christians.

Oregon Collegiate Veterans' Club of LBCC

To further the knowledge of Veterans' affairs and benefits for all LBCC veterans and their families; and to act as the voice for these veterans to the senate and college.

Phi Beta Lambda

To promote future business leadership and involve people interested in business.

Phi Theta Kappa (Phi Iota chapter)

Honorary Scholastic Society whose purpose is to promote academic excellence; to develop good moral character, and to cultivate leadership among the students of LBCC.

Photography Club

To promote the Art of Photography, to develop skills in printing and processing, and to aid club members in acquiring greater photographic skills thru constructive critique sessions. Hopefully we will be able to put on a few photography shows.

Racing, Performance, and Mechanics (R.P.M.)

To promote knowledge, recreation, and the safety of automotive technology.

Ski Club

To get enough people together to charter a bus to ski areas, such as Hoodoo Bowl, Mt. Hood, Mt. Bachelor; to have fun.

Student Nurses of Oregon (SNO)

To aid in the preparation of student nurses for the assumption of professional responsibilities.

Water Renovation

To further mutual interests of the students and college and to accept responsibility and recommendations for the development of water treatment personnel.

ROTC available to LBCC students

"Young men attending community colleges have options with regard to their military obligations that they may not be aware of." So states a spokesman for the Army ROTC detachment at Oregon State University. "Although young men have no control over their military obligations, they do have control over the manner in which they serve."

Captain Boyd, of the Corvallis based Army ROTC, stressed that serving as a commissioned officer is one option that is available to LBCC students.

Linn-Benton Community College students can participate in the Army ROTC program at Oregon State University. Enrolling for Military Science classes — which provide knowledge and leadership skills that are of value in any profession — is not signing up with the Army, Captain Boyd emphasized. It simply involves signing up for a University class as a part time student at OSU. Moreover, as long as the student satisfactorily participates in the program, he receives a draft deferment which will guarantee his opportunity to finish college.

Captain Boyd will be on the LBCC campus on December 8 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the College Center to discuss with interested students additional details of the ROTC program. The next registration for new students at OSU will be conducted on 3 January 1972.

Theatre workshop players

You are your brother's keeper

By JANET KOCH

The three plays which the theater workshop is going to put on at the Senior Citizen Center, December 9, from 12 noon to 1 p.m. (in their order of presentation) are: 'Gypsy,' with Jean Hammel portraying the title role of Gypsy Rose Lee and Allison Broadwater as her mother; 'Antigone,' with Linda Hays as Ismene and Janet Koch as Antigone, and 'The Hairy Falsetto' with Sherilyn Nicklous, Bill Beers, and Steve Storey.

In the first scene, 'Gypsy,' the differences between the wants and needs of a mother and daughter come to a head. Gypsy is growing up, but her mother still wants to manage her, to be a major part of her life. Her desperation to still be needed by her daughter is shown in this statement, "I'm a pro! Not an old work horse you can take out to pasture just because you think you're riding high on your own!"

The second play scene, 'Antigone,' is part of the first scene of that play. It consists of dialogue between the two sisters Antigone and Ismene, the two remaining children of Oedipus. Both his sons are dead, and the new king (Creon) refuses to give one of them a proper burial. Antigone is hoping to enlist her sister's aid in breaking Creon's law — even at the penalty of death.

The last play, by far the most light-hearted, is 'The Hairy Falsetto.' It is a take-off from a play by Eugene Ionesco, entitled "The Bald Soprano," and at one time was also named "The Reluctant Wolf," the only thing the play being done has in common with "The Bald Soprano" is in the far out style, though this one is not as far out as the original. The three performers portray Little Red Riding Hood, the Judge, and the defending attorney, respectively. The purpose of the play is to find the murderer of Granny.

Mr. Startz, the drama coach, stresses the importance of student gain in his class. It's not important that a schedule be devised and rigidly followed, but that the student learns three things: 1) the student learns to work within a structure (the play), 2) the student learns to work with others. In acting, you are your brother's keeper. You are responsible to him as well as to yourself, 3) the student learns how to get up in front of people — this is particularly good for shy people. It should help each individual to develop confidence and poise. In fact, he said he thought it would be a good thing if a theater workshop could be just that; a workshop where the student learned all about putting on a play, and did not necessarily have to put it on for an audience. The EXPERIENCE is the thing. He stated the aim of the first course as such: "What is important is the realization that the first course is not to turn out professional actors." Because of this attitude, he was not particularly disappointed when the students voted to present their plays off campus rather than in the Student Center, as originally planned.

Though the plays will not be seen at LBCC, it is hoped by Mr. Startz that others will feel encouraged to take the workshop. As acting is a means of communication, he stated, it carries a particular validity in our times.

News briefs

Register to vote

All students 18 years or older wishing to register to vote are urged to do so in the Activities Office of the College Center by December 18 in order to be able to vote in the special election on January 18. Margaret Orsi is Registrar of Linn County but may register anyone in Oregon.

Farley schedules ICC noon confab

Inter-Club Council (ICC) will meet on Thursday, December 9, at 12 noon, in the Conference Room. This meeting will cover general organizational procedures. All club representatives, presidents, and advisors are requested to attend.

Manuel Izquierdo art on display

The Statewide Art Services Division of the Museum of Art, University of Oregon, is, with the aid of Robert Miller, bringing to LBCC an exhibition of drawings and sculpture sketches by Manuel Izquierdo. Mr. Izquierdo is now the Head of the Sculpture Department at the Portland Art Museum. His works (unique in their definite Spanish nature) will be on display from November 29 to December 23, 1971.

Volunteer needed

An Albany teacher, Diane Warrick, needs assistance with some mentally retarded children. All interested persons can contact her by phoning 926-0796.

sponsors local blood drive

The blood drive sponsored by LBCC student nurses, originally planned for early December, has been temporarily postponed.

The Bloodmobile will be at the Elks Temple in ALBANY on December 14, Monday, from 12 noon until 6 p.m.

"Chubby" expands food services

Managed by Doug Hurst, a former LBCC student, Chubby's Corner extended its' service. The new hours are from 8:00 a.m. until 4:30 p.m. Plans are currently under consideration for a coffee and doughnut break at meetings scheduled in the Student Center conference room and lounge.

Laser seminars

Just one in a series of science seminars, the topic — LASERS will be discussed by Dave Perkins in C-4. Tentatively scheduled for December 8, the subject is one that received the Nobel prize this year.

Opinion

EDITORIAL

Recently, a question was raised as to the legality of allowing a religious group, such as the Jesus for Lunch Bunch, receive the allotted $50.00 for clubs. Some people on campus feel that a club such as this is a personal affront to their own moral beliefs. While this is a valid point, the many arguments raised are all based on a misunderstanding.

According to the U.S. Constitution, stated Gary Kennan at the last senate meeting, church and state shall remain separate. If the students of LBCC were to vote to give the Jesus for Lunch Bunch the $50.00 allotted for each club, some say, that would be supporting a religious organization with state funds. However, the funds that support such student activities are completely student funds, not state funds.

Even though the technicalities are out of the way, some people still feel that the principle of the matter is still present.

The whole issue boils down to a matter of personal beliefs and moral attitudes. Should LBCC students fund a club with religious overtones?

Students involved in student government will be deciding this question for all the students of Linn-Benton in the near future. If, as a student, you don't want your decision to be made by a small number of student government members, then attend the next Student Senate meeting and voice your opinion.

Let it be the real majority that decides where student funds will go.

By GARRY W. MORSE

The LBCC Student Senate died December 1, 1971. The late Student Senate, age 2 years, died in an attempt to give birth to reason and order.

The Senate is survived by a distant relative known only as "The Three Ring Circus."

Pallbearers will be Harvey M. Scott, Mike D. Farley, Mary S. Huber, Jo Ann Williams, JoAnn Olsen, along with another, as yet undisclosed, member of the Senate.

Services will be announced at a later date so the official mourners, which will be an aggregation of Senators, Club Representatives and Directors, will be able to pay homage to the deceased.

"We have the death . . . we await the Resurrection."

Faculty column

A little joke

By MR. THOMAS CHASE

During the course of an "English" lesson, Mr. Williams, a fifth-grade teacher at Chabot Elementary School in Oakland, looked towards Willy, a grim-looking black student sitting in the back of the classroom and asked, "What is an adverbial clause?" "Oh, man," he replied, "I sure wish I had YOUR problems!" What should Mr. Williams do? Penalize the boy for having different values and purposes than the teacher, for perceiving a different reality? Penalize the "dumb" perceiver because he does not share the same idea of "knowledge" that the teacher shares?

This sad little "joke" underlines a problem in education today. Since I have made the jump from being a student (who learned under the old conventional lecture technique) to being an instructor here at LBCC, I have found that the methods of instruction used when I was a student have been turned inside out. The lecture technique is simply becoming less and less practical since a lecture is based on the assumption that its "content" is what is to be learned. But a lecture is only what the instructor said from his point of view. For the learner, its content is what HE HEARD. And so the instructor would have to work on finding out what the individual learner heard, therefore all but abandoning lecture for the rest of the term.

The point is that the "lesson" is always about the learner — what the learner HEARD. Instead of fifty minutes of lecture, "the content" should be the meanings the individual writer gives to his assignment, the meanings the individual reader assigns to the poem, the short story, the novel, the play, and the possibility of extending or modifying those meanings. That seems to me to be all any "English lesson" (or any lesson for that matter) can ever be about.

Crowded movies vex patron

By GARY LONIEN

When was the last time you tried to see a movie in Schafer Lounge? After battling your way through the queue of people trying to get a glimpse of a thought provoking episode, you would usually find every seat in the house taken by avid patrons. But, upon closer examination you can find quite a few of them are hunched over some books. You can see them peering through the semi-stygian darkness trying to find the lines on the paper on which to write!

Who are these lost souls? Were they studying in the lounge when they were accosted by the movie? Were they trapped by the line of people outside? Did they go in for the express purpose of watching the movie and found it so "interesting" that they decided to study instead?

In any case, there is a time and place for everything. On most days the Schafer Lounge is open to study. When a movie is being shown, however, the lounge should be reserved for patrons only. The library, while not equipped with any desirable distractions such as "The Bride of Frankenstein" or "Dracula," makes up for it in a small way. It provides well-lighted tables and books for reference.

The next time you think of studying in the lounge during a movie, have a heart. It can completely ruin someone's day. How would you like it if you had a mystery preying on your mind? Did Dracula accomplish his foul deed? Where is Klopstokia? Why did the bride of Frankenstein run? Unfortunately, these questions can't be answered by any soap opera.

In the bustling people outside the Schafer Lounge, only the most fragmented reception of a movie is possible. Soplease, when you study in Schafer Lounge, do it on days a movie isn't being shown.

In September someone from LBCC gave me a lift from school to Payless lot in downtown Albany. I left a sack containing my "whites" in the car; my white shirt, pants and shoes that I use on the job.

River music roars

Whitewater whets musical appetites

By JAMIE KILBURN

Treating students and faculty to some of that good 'ol Blue Grass music for about 3 hours was the group, Whitewater, last November 22 in the Center Commons.

Having only been together since August 1, the group really gets it on living up to their name Whitewater.

"A large percentage of Blue Grass music comes out of the South East and our objective is to sing songs we can relate to," says Al Yates, "those of the Northwest such as "Spring time in the White Clouds," "Mountain Woman," etc.

The group consists of four well diversified string pluckers; Alden Yates, guitar and bass; Teddy Jones, fiddle, guitar and bass; Michael Wendling, twelve string guitar, bottle neck guitar and five string banjo; Paul Smith, mandolin, guitar, and bass.

Paul Smith and Alden Yates compose most of the groups original pieces. Within six months the group hopes to be playing all original songs.

After their performance here at LBCC, the group was on its way to perform with Fleetwood Mac on Wednesday.

Occasionally Whitewater can be heard on the Sunday night folk hour on radio station KINK FM, at 8 p.m. Persons wishing to hear the group are encouraged to call the station and ask for the group by name.

The tallest one of the group, Teddy Jones, holds up his end of the work, playing the biggest instrument in the band. Occasionally, Teddy sheds his bass to finger his fiddle or gleefully play his guitar.

Vets meet

The LBCC Oregon Collegiate Veterans Club held its first meeting Thursday, November 18. The meeting was a general information and organizational meeting. There were twelve potential members present. Those present expressed a desire to wait for better student representation before permanent officers are elected and a constitution drawn up.

Temporary officers elected were: Chairman, Larry Ferrell of Albany; Vice Chairman, Deane Richardson of Stayton; Club Representative, Chris Anderson of Albany; and Poster Chairman, Jim Terhune of Lebanon.

The next club meeting will be Monday, December 6, 12 noon, in Schafer Lounge. Club officers will be elected during this meeting.

PBL seeking

Currently seeking new members, Phi Beta Lambda will welcome all business majors. For additional information concerning membership requirements, call any of the PBL Club officers.

John Nitcher, President, 928-3637; Bill Hamill, Vice President, 753-3190; Nancy Hall, Secretary, 753-8949; Donna Watson, Treasurer, 487-4292; Dorothy Woods, Historian, 258-4169; Craig Blaylock, Reporter, 926-3237.

Work experience program devised

Organizational Work Experience is a new program devised for the offering of practical on-the-job experience to interested business students. The purpose of the program is twofold: 1) the main point is to show and teach the student what it is like to work with others. 2) This gives them the opportunity to apply the theories and principles they have learned in the classroom.

The organization is comprised of a board (Maynard Chambers, Alan Schultz, Patsy Chester, Sharon Clark, Steve Shelton, Bob Talbot, and Al Walczak), a General Manager (Jim Pruett), a Sales Manager (Sharon Clark), Accounting and Operations Manager (Joe Cox), and Operations Personnel (at present there are three people who are involved in this part of it — Barbara Hansen, Linda Moore, and Hubert Muyelle). It is important that more people become interested in this program as Jim (drafted), Sharon and Joe (graduated) are all going to be giving up their posts — Sharon, because she got a permanent job as a result of her work in this show. More students must join, so there will not only be replacements for those leaving, but so there will also be students not only managing, but out working.

Besides getting a grade, which is decided by your immediate superior (Jim's grade would be decided by the board; he would give Sharon and Joe their grades; Joe would evaluate the other students), you are paid for your 12½ work hours per week. For instance, if you got an A, you might get $90.00, a B would rate $80.00, and so on. (These figures are not a set rate, but only an example. The rates depend on how much is coming into the organization.) Special care and methods of double-checking are used in the affixing of grades, to be sure they are fair.

Anyone who is interested should contact Phillip V. Clark, the Department Chairman of the Business Division. His approval of the student is absolutely necessary before he can register for the course.

Runners crush George Fox in season opener

Bob Dekoning (30) jumps against Travis Curtis (23) during the 56-87 rout of George Fox J.V.

Hard work in practice finally paid off for the LBCC Roadrunners December 1, as they polished off the George Fox J.V., 87 to 56. It was the eleventh straight opening game victory for Coach Butch Kimpton.

The tip was controlled by LBCC, Bob Dekoning hit for two, and the Roadrunners were never headed. The Roadrunners, capitalizing on early fast breaks, hot outside shooting and George Fox turnovers throughout the game, ran up a halftime score of 46-25, giving them a 21 point lead. In the second half all the bench saw action as LBCC outscored their opponents 41-31.

Defense proved to be a key factor as the Roadrunners held George Fox J.V. to only 25 for 52 shots, while they themselves shot 70 times, hitting 35. LBCC dominated what little board action there was, getting 44 while George Fox got 21. Bruce Martin pulled off 8 rebounds, with Tom Williams and Glenn Hubert getting 6, and Bob Dekoning and Kenny Ray with 5.

LBCC had four people scoring in double figures. Jim Davidson, the games high scorer, hit 9 for 16 from the field and 5 for 5 from the line for 23 points. Second high scorer, Terry Cornutt, hit 7 for 8 from the field and 3 for 5 from the line for 17 points.

First year men, Kenny Ray and Glenn Hubert, hit for 12 and 11 points respectively. Ray was 6 for 14 from the field. Hubert was 5 for 8 from the field and got 1 from the line. Other scorers were Bob Dekoning with 5 points, Tom Williams with 8, hitting 4 for 5; Tim LaBrousse with 7, and Bruce Martin with 4.

Leading scorers for George Fox J.V. were Del Dittus with a losing 14 point effort, Steve Gulley and Tom Bromleewe had 12 apiece.

In last years action, LBCC split with George Fox, winning the first and dropping the second in a close game.

COMING TOURNEY:

Four teams will complete for first and second place trophies at the Mt. Hood Community College tournament, December 10-11, at Mt. Hood.

Opening game will pit LBCC against Clackamas at 7:00 p.m. and Mt. Hood will go against Lane Community College at 9:00 p.m. Losers of the two games will play the next night at 7:00 p.m. The winner of that game will take third place, while the loser gets fourth. At 9:00 p.m. the winners will play to decide the champions. Winners will get first and losers will take second. Mt. Hood has been forecasted as the team to beat for the championship.

Bruce Martin attempts a drive in last years action. Bruce was out with a knee injury and missed the last 10 games of the season.

Tim LaBrousse goes up for two, helping his 10 point season average last year.

THE COMMUTER — December 6, 1971

Sports

Bowl games' teams picked

Football season is slowly winding down for most of the colleges, but the Pre-Season bowl games are just getting wound up.

The Grand-daddy of the bowl games, the Rose Bowl, will put undefeated University of Michigan Wolverines against the Stanford Indians, who were eight and three for the season.

In what should be another game of the year...decade... century... the Orange Bowl in Miami has Nebraska and Alabama both undefeated at 11-0.

The Sugar Bowl nailed two of last weeks losers to Nebraska and Alabama, Oklahoma at 10-1 and Auburn the same.

Finally, the last of the New Years Day Bowls will have Texas (7-2), and Penn State (9-0), battling it out in the Cotton Bowl in Dallas.

Meanwhile, in South Bend, Indiana, the Fighting Irish of Notre Dame nixed all bowl game offers. After a team vote decided, after an 8-3 season they had not measured up to expectations.

One of the newer bowls, the Fiesta Bowl, has Arizona State (9-1) vs. Florida State (7-3), in Tempe, Arizona.

Other Bowls include the Gator Bowl — Georgia (10-1) vs. North Carolina (8-2-1).

Astro-Blue Bonnet Bowl, in the Astrodome in Houston, — Colorado (9-2) vs. University of Houston (8-3).

The Liberty Bowl shows Tennessee (7-2) against Arkansas (8-2-1).

In the Tangerine Bowl, Toledo of Ohio, with the longest winning streak in college football at 34 wins with no losses, vs. William and Mary's College (6-5).

Finally of the major bowls the Peach Bowl in Atlanta, Georgia, has Georgia Tech against Archie Manning's old school, University of Mississippi.
