ATTENDANCE, TARDINESS, & PARTICIPATION

Attendance is important for this class. We meet once a week and the structure of the class is that of a professional design studio. If you're unable to attend any classes, please inform the instructor and your teammates in a timely manner.

COURTESY AND RESPECT

I encourage you to share your unique perspectives. This is a class where we can all learn from each other! Please be kind, constructive, and professional with your comments. Critique and group problem solving are huge components of this course, therefore everyone will be expected to both participate and facilitate the active inclusion of others.

ASSIGNMENTS, ACTIVITIES, & GRADING

COURSE ACTIVITIES

This is a professional design studio and will be structured similarly to what you may experience in your future career. You will be assigned to teams: each team will be given a project with a client. Teammates will select roles for one another and will be expected to manage their projects within their teams. There will be checkups, critiques, and presentations throughout the term. Much of this will be self directed and independent, with the instructor acting as Creative Director and advisor. Your team will also be communicating with a client throughout the term, including presentations and emails.

PROGRESS MEETINGS

We will meet as a whole class at the start of most class periods. These meetings will be brief progress check-ins. Teams will share updates and receive instruction for next steps. Students will break out into their groups afterwards to resume work or other scheduled activities. Progress meetings may be followed by in-depth meetings with the instructor and the separate groups from time to time.

TIME KEEPING

Everyone will be expected to track their hours and submit timesheets at intervals aligning with project milestones. You may use whatever method of tracking your time and preparing your timesheets you wish. Timesheets must reflect a clear breakdown of tasks in 15 minute increments. The instructor will provide further direction and suggestions at the start of the term.
