Each day, we try to persuade others to adopt our point of view on any number of topics: assure a parent or spouse that we REALLY didn't see the post behind us in the parking lot; persuade the instructor in the math class to take the late assignment; or convince the voters to approve a revision to a current law.

As a result of completing WR 122, students should be able to

1. Analyze the rhetorical needs (the needs of their audience in relationship to the assignment) for college-level persuasive writing assignments.
2. Apply appropriate levels of critical thinking strategies (knowledge, comprehension, application, analysis, synthesis, evaluation) in their written assignments, with an emphasis on analysis and evaluation/persuasion.
3. Implement appropriate rhetorical elements and organization (introduction, thesis, development and support, counter-argument, conclusion, etc.) in their written assignments, with an emphasis on standard argument models, particularly the Toulmin model.
4. Locate, evaluate, and integrate high-quality information and opinion appropriate for college-level analysis and argument assignments.
5. Craft sentences and paragraphs that communicate their ideas clearly and effectively using words, sentence patterns, and writing conventions at a high college level to make their writing clear, credible, and persuasive.

In order to achieve these goals, students will be involved in a variety of classroom activities, group projects, and independent tasks. We will pace the work so that one activity builds on the one before, and the readings and projects will complement one another. Attendance in class and at group meetings is crucial to success in the course. If you miss class, it is your responsibility to get the information.

Evaluation for the course will be based on

- 1) in-class writings and responses, journals, etc.;
- 2) essays to be worked on independently or with a group and peer edited in class;
- 3) notes and quizzes; and
- 4) a final exam (take home and due at the regularly-scheduled final exam time).

WR122 writing is held to at least WR121 proficiency standards. If you have not yet taken WR121 and plan to do so, you may experience difficulties if you have taken WR122 first.

Students may seek extra help with me during office hours or by appointment, or at the Writing Center.

Late papers will receive a 10% penalty, but each student will receive a "Get Out of Jail Free" card. This may be used to eliminate late "fees" if the paper is turned in within one week of the due date. If not used, it may be turned in week ten for bonus points.

Additional Guidelines:

 Communicate with the instructor – preferably in person or by e-mail – if you have situations arise which make it impossible for you to be in class. If you communicate, I can help.

*Type or word-process final revised paragraphs and essays (except those done in class or otherwise noted).

*Rough drafts and peer comments/edits must be turned in with the revised essay assignments.

*Plan for all work to be done on time... this includes drafts and revisions.

*Plan to do your own work. You'll be learning how to give appropriate credit for information and/or quotations from others' work so that you will avoid plagiarism.

When you do it yourself, you'll learn better!

Since this is a course about persuasion and (sometimes) disagreement, we must each do our part to show respect for and to one another and our readers. Since we all want respect, we need to show respect - even to (especially to) those with whom we disagree.

To minimize distraction to yourself and others, all phones must be silenced and stowed when class begins.

Campus Resources:

+Conferences with the instructor. I'll have office hours each day that I'm on campus. If those hours do not work for you, we can meet by appointment. (Turn over for office and office hours)

+Library (541-917-4638)

+Writing helps: a cooperative writing service including ESOL, Writing Desk, Writing and Study Skills Labs and more.

+Writing Center: Writing Center Assistants and Writing Peer Tutors will provide assistance (not copy editing, not correcting) with specific paragraph and essay assignments. It is located on the upper level, Willamette Hall (WH).

+ Computer Labs: Library and Forum 202

WR122 Argument
General Class Format

As we move through the term, we'll have a chapter reading about type of writing and we'll also read articles to "flesh out" the concepts. You'll find that we'll go back and forth among the chapters to highlight elements. When readings are due, come prepared with notes from the chapter or article. We will use a modified "Cornell" style of note-taking for this part of the preparation. Divide a sheet of paper so that there are three basic sections:

Generally, you'll be expected to have one sheet of paper per chapter. Since you will come prepared, you'll be ready to participate in the student-lead discussions. Make notes for the rhetorical chapters and "main idea" notes for the essays.

Harvard Discussion groups.

Based on a model forum used at Harvard University, the discussion group generally works like this: students in each group select a facilitator; all group members will be discussion participants. The facilitator's job is to see that all members have opportunity to participate and to keep the discussion moving. Each participant may add to his or her notes as the discussion progresses.

Groups will be assigned with three or four students in each group. You may begin the discussions with questions about the work, including any possible explanations. Let the discussion develop from that point. I will assist by offering question prompts on the board.

You will take notes for chapters 1-4, and they will be checked during your computer classroom days.
