Meeting Needs

Recognizing the needs of all continues to be a major focus. Throughout this academic year, these efforts have been occurring in many ways on our campus. Some of these are:

- a group meets regularly to discuss ways to support international students' needs. This includes reviewing admission standards, better assessment, progress reviews, etc.
- a small task force meets to review and discuss progress of Puerto Rican students. These students are U.S. citizens, but English is not their first language.
- programs to introduce U.S. students to international foods, ideas, role models of color, national and international issues.

Second Languages for Oregon Schools?

Statewide, we see another attempt to require students to gain proficiency in a second language. Nationally, the President is being encouraged to internationalize our educational perspective through the promotion of exchange programs.

". . . and Taxes"

This year all international students must file a tax return (1040NR) plus a form called an Information Statement. These forms must be filed whether or not the student has worked. If you are asked for information by students or have friends who are non-residents, there is a guide available in the Student Programs Office. We will also have the (1040NR) forms after March 8.

"Big Shoes" to Fill

Both Celine Davies, Programming Board, and Sachi Kanazaki, Student Council, will be moving on to Oregon State University after June. If you know of good students, international or not, who might be interested in representing international students or programming for events, please encourage them. They can see Charlene Fella (me) or Tammi Paul (CC-213), or I will send the paperwork to you to give to them.

International Faculty Development Seminars

The Council on International Educational Exchange has announced its program of International Faculty Development Seminars. Participation is open to full-time teaching faculty and administrators at two- or four-year institutions of higher education. No more than two faculty members from the same academic institution may be accepted for a single seminar site. You are encouraged to apply early as enrollment is limited.

The 1993/94 application forms are available in CC-213 or call Charlene Fella at extension 831 and get them by mail.
